

DASH ARTS DACHA

DACHA AT THE BRITISH LIBRARY

Retreat from the confusion and chaos of the revolution this summer to our Dacha - a rural summer idyll, an oasis of cushions, rugs and home comforts, an ever-changing enchanted space laced with performance, music, and a kitchen stocked with vodka, hot tea and snacks. Our Russian country house, the Dacha, explores life in the summer of 1917 through the eyes of the Popov family dacha in Vyritsa, several hours outside Petrograd.

'Visitors were greeted with traditional cherry jam tea, card games, live music and the most fun, raucous late-night dancing at the festival...' The Observer (2016)

Lose yourself in board games and cards, sip tea from the samovar that keeps on giving, partake in fevered political discussion with special guest speakers and enjoy live music and impromptu theatre performances where audiences can pick up a script and help us bring to life a play by some of the extraordinary avantgarde playwrights and artists of the turbulent revolutionary time.

Dash Arts Dacha is curated by Dash Arts co-Artistic Directors Josephine Burton and Tim Supple, designed by Bryan Woltjen with support from Professor Stephen Lovell, Kings College London (author of Summerfolk: A History of the Dacha 1710-2000 and packed with hidden text, musicians, actors, activists and thinkers.

"The most fabulous evocative creative space with astoundingly good music. Thank you! (Plus great tea)" Clare Needham-Potts

Dash Arts creates artistic experiences that change the way we see the world. Founded in 2005 by our co-Artistic Directors, Dash Arts has created award winning new work in India, North Africa and the Middle East and currently in the midst of REVOLUTION17: an explosion of performance by artists from across the Post Soviet States.

Suggested programme:

Dates: We propose opening on Thursday, 27 April (to be open alongside the opening of the exhibition) and running through Sunday, 14 May. Most of the labour to install the Dacha will come from our own crew so we believe we could get-in alongside the build of the main exhibition.

Daily Activity: Our Dacha will be open at all times that the Library is open to the public. There will always be at least one member of the Popov household in situ, inviting visitors into the Dacha and engaging with them as much or as little as is required. The samovar will always be on, tea and snacks available, books and games on the shelves and in the 'library' space we will show short films on a loop.

The proposed schedule of Dacha activity is proposed as follows:

Dacha Design

The Dash Arts Dacha is a timeless, flexible format, multi-artform audience inclusive experience that will jettison us into the Popov's summerhouse. The Popov's warm inviting cheerful characterful holiday home away from home hosts games, play-readings, film-nights, live music and endless tea from the bottom-less samovar. Utilising the framework and footprint of the traditional dacha, the design seeks to thrust the participant into a safe but politically charged environment, in the midst of the revolutions. The hallmarks are all in place. In fact, the finest amongst them immediately to be seen as you enter the hall, a resplendent display of icons, central amongst them, the beloved (or is he?) Czar, surrounded by icons above an intricate and delicate table of religious tokens.

- To one end, the kitchenette laden with steaming samovar, billowing out the inviting scent of Russian tea. Surrounding the samovar like a halo are Muscovite snacks, pickled fare from the garden and fresh bread.
- To the other, a study. A desk laden with letters to and from old Popov's wide sphere of influence. An old map adorns the wall above, and surrounding it are treasured photos of friends and family.
- Around the corner we enter a games-room, and in here we find a table, it is here that bold new discussions will begin, plots made and die thrown. The games-room also functions as a library, and books adorn the shelves interspersed by babushkas, collectables and meubles from across the continent.

Integrated through the Dacha, are discrete texts, located within shelves, frames, shelves of bureau. These texts are translations (where relevant) from great classic works of Russian literature and plays which refer to the experience of the Dacha – drawn from Nabokov, Chekhov, Tolstoy and Gorky. Throughout the day, the space transforms with the activities that take place. Tables are brought out to welcome more guests and the main hallway area becomes a dining space, a performance space or a space to dance. The hosts gather support from the pubic to transform the space, and in doing so, make it their own.

The Dacha at the British Library in 2017

Dash Arts will deliver the Dacha as a performance-ready, self-contained event suited for the mezzanine space. Dash Arts programmes and books all activities and performances within the Dacha
